TERM: SECOND 2026/2027 ACADEMIC SESSION

WEEK: SEVEN

CLASS: SS3

SUBJECT: Citizenship & Heritage Studies

TOPIC: Globalisation & Citizenship

Introduction

- Globalisation is the growing interdependence of nations through trade, technology, communication and culture. It shrinks distance and links the fates of people — citizenship now has a global dimension.

Effects of globalisation

- Positive: trade and investment, technology transfer, the free flow of information, migration and cultural exchange, and cooperation on global problems (climate change, pandemics — COVID-19 showed the world is one). Negative: the dominance of the big economies, the loss of local industries (dumped imports), cultural erosion, the brain drain, and the globalisation of crime (cybercrime, trafficking, terrorism).

Global citizenship

- A global citizen knows the world is interconnected, respects diversity, acts for human rights and the environment (sustainable consumption), supports global cooperation (the UN, AU, African Union and the SDGs) and balances the national and the global loyalty.

Nigeria in the global system

- Nigeria's roles: trade and investment diplomacy, peacekeeping in Africa, the diaspora (the Nollywood and music exports, remittances of about $20 billion a year), and advocacy within the UN, AU and OPEC.

CLASS EVALUATION

1. Define globalisation.
2. State three positive and three negative effects of globalisation.
3. What is global citizenship?
4. How does the Nigerian diaspora contribute to national development?

WEEK: EIGHT

CLASS: SS3

SUBJECT: Citizenship & Heritage Studies

TOPIC: Media & Public Opinion

Introduction

- The media — print, broadcast and now the digital and social media — are the channels of mass communication. They shape public opinion: the views, attitudes and beliefs the public holds on issues.

Functions of the media

- Informing the public; educating; entertaining; the watchdog function (investigating and exposing corruption, abuse and misgovernance — the Fourth Estate of the realm); agenda setting (what the public thinks about); and the platform for debate and public participation.

Media and democracy

- A free press is a pillar of democracy: it gives citizens the information to vote well, holds government accountable (investigative journalism) and gives voice to the voiceless. The NBC and the Nigerian Press Council regulate practice; the freedom of the press is guaranteed by Section 39 of the Constitution.

The new media and its challenges

- Social media (Facebook, X, WhatsApp, TikTok) democratise speech — but also spread fake news, hate speech, rumour and manipulation (the 'echo chambers' and political misinformation); cyberbullying and privacy erosion; and the promotion of cybercrime. The responsible citizen verifies before sharing, and the state balances regulation with freedom.

CLASS EVALUATION

1. Define public opinion.
2. State four functions of the mass media.
3. Why is the press called the fourth estate?
4. Mention two dangers of social media and how to guard against them.

WEEK: NINE

CLASS: SS3

SUBJECT: Citizenship & Heritage Studies

TOPIC: Conflict Resolution & Peace

Introduction

- Conflict is a disagreement between individuals, groups or nations over interests, values or resources. It is natural — but it must be resolved peacefully, because violence destroys lives and development.

Types and causes

- Types: interpersonal, communal, ethnic, religious, political and international. Causes: competition for resources (land, water, oil); poverty and unemployment; ethnic and religious intolerance; poor governance and rigged elections; the arms trade; the breakdown of communication; and ignorance.

Methods of resolution

- Negotiation — the parties discuss directly; mediation — a third party helps them agree (the UN, the AU, the Elders); conciliation — building confidence step by step; arbitration — a third party decides (binding); adjudication — the courts decide; dialogue, tolerance and compromise; and the structural remedies: justice, poverty reduction, and inclusive governance. The conflict cycle: latent → manifest → crisis → resolution → peacebuilding.

Peace and national development

- Peace is the precondition of development: schools, farms, factories and businesses flourish without conflict. The National Peace Committee and the traditional and religious institutions mediate; youth are trained in peace-building.

CLASS EVALUATION

1. Define conflict.
2. State four causes of conflict.
3. Differentiate mediation from arbitration.
4. Why is peace a precondition for development?

TERM: SECOND 2026/2027 ACADEMIC SESSION

WEEK: TEN

CLASS: SS3

SUBJECT: Citizenship & Heritage Studies

TOPIC: International Organizations & Nigeria

Introduction

- Nigeria belongs to the United Nations, the African Union, ECOWAS, the Commonwealth, OPEC and the Non-Aligned Movement. This week reviews the organisations and Nigeria's role in each.

The organisations

- UN — peace, human rights and development (Nigeria: a past president of the General Assembly and a peacekeeping contributor).
- AU — continental unity and peace (Nigeria: one of the founding powers, the funding of the AU, peacemaking in Liberia, Sierra Leone, the Gambia and Sudan). ECOWAS — regional integration (Nigeria: the largest member, with the ECOWAS Commission in Abuja, ECOMOG peacekeeping, and the free-movement regime). OPEC — oil price coordination. Commonwealth — cooperation in English-speaking states. NAM — non-alignment and the global south's voice.

Benefits and obligations

- Benefits: cooperation, trade, aid and investment; collective security and peacekeeping; technical assistance (UNICEF, WHO); the platform of the global south (OPEC, NAM); and international legitimacy. Obligations: the payment of dues, respect for the charters, compliance with the rulings (the ICJ's Bakassi ruling of 2002), and participation in peace missions.

CLASS EVALUATION

1. Name five international organisations to which Nigeria belongs.
2. What is Nigeria's role in ECOWAS?
3. Mention two benefits of AU membership.
4. What obligation did the ICJ's Bakassi ruling impose on Nigeria?

WEEK: ELEVEN

CLASS: SS3

SUBJECT: Citizenship & Heritage Studies

TOPIC: Youth, The Future & Good Governance (Revision)

Introduction

- This week revises the term's civic themes — globalisation, media, conflict, and international cooperation — and focuses them on the youth: what young people need from governance and what they owe the nation.

What youth need

- Quality education and skills; jobs and entrepreneurship support (the YES programme, N-Power and the small business funds); health and a safe environment; participation in decision-making (the Not-Too-Young-To-Run Act lowered the age of candidature and gave youth a voice); and leaders who are accountable and transparent.

What youth owe

- Patriotism and hardwork; lawful conduct; the rejection of cultism, drug abuse and examination malpractice; active participation (voting, community service); the protection of public property; and the promotion of unity, tolerance and peace — including online.

Good governance and the SDGs

- Good governance (participation, rule of law, transparency, accountability, equity, effectiveness) is the theme of SDG 16. Where governance is good, youth flourish and the nation grows.

CLASS EVALUATION

1. State three things young people need from government.
2. Mention four duties of the youth to the nation.
3. What does the Not-Too-Young-To-Run Act provide?
4. List three principles of good governance.

TERM: SECOND 2026/2027 ACADEMIC SESSION

WEEK: TWELVE

CLASS: SS3

SUBJECT: Citizenship & Heritage Studies

TOPIC: Citizenship, Constitution & Fundamental Rights (Revision)

Introduction

- This week revises the foundations of civic education: who a citizen is, the constitution that governs us, and the fundamental rights the constitution guarantees — together with the duties those rights impose.

Citizenship

- A citizen is a legally recognised member of a state with full rights and duties. Acquisition: by birth (born in Nigeria of Nigerian parents — or of parents who are citizens; those born in Nigeria of at least one parent who belongs to a community indigenous to Nigeria); by registration (a foreigner married to a Nigerian, or a person of Nigerian descent born abroad); by naturalisation (a foreigner who has lived lawfully in Nigeria for 15 years, of good character, useful to the country — granted by the President); by honorary conferment. Loss: by renunciation, by a conviction, by acquiring the citizenship of another country in some circumstances (dual citizenship is limited for political offices).

The constitution

- The constitution is the supreme law of the land — the document that establishes the state, distributes power and limits government. Types: written/unwritten, rigid/flexible. Nigeria's: the Clifford (1922), Richards (1946), Macpherson (1951), Lyttleton (1954), the Independence Constitution (1960), the Republican (1963), the 1979, and the 1999 Constitution (as amended — the current supreme law).

Fundamental rights

- Chapter IV of the 1999 Constitution: the right to life; the right to the dignity of the human person (no torture, slavery or degrading treatment); the right to personal liberty; the right to fair hearing; the right to private and family life; freedom of thought, conscience and religion; freedom of expression and the press; the right to peaceful assembly and association; freedom of movement; freedom from discrimination; and the right to own property. These rights are not absolute — they may be limited by law in the public interest (security, health, morality).

Duties of a citizen

- Obedience to the law; the payment of taxes and rates; the defence of the country (the NYSC and military service); respect for the rights of others; the protection of public property; participation in the democratic process (voting, registration); and the promotion of the unity and good image of Nigeria.

CLASS EVALUATION

1. Define citizenship.
2. State two ways citizenship can be acquired.
3. Which constitution is in force in Nigeria today?
4. List five fundamental rights.
5. State three duties of a citizen.
